

Good morning principal, vice principal, teachers and fellow schoolmates. I am Ng Cheuk Ming from 7A. Today I would like to share a topic with you all, that is on global warming. Apart from the financial crisis, Hong Kong is also suffering from a real crisis – last month was the hottest October ever since weather records were started in 1884. The record-breaking temperatures reflected, to a certain extent, a long-term warming trend in the world. This problem was caused by the warm climate and urbanization in China. The high buildings block the cool air flow to the southern China coastal areas. It caused the monthly mean October temperatures rise in the past 50 years. Therefore, the public should pay attention to the temperature while doing outdoor activities.

To improve the environment, I think people should use less air-conditioners, it could save electricity and reduce the greenhouse gas emissions every year. This can alleviate the problem from getting worse. Last but not least, global warming is an important phenomenon that we must pay attention to while we are facing economic crisis. I hope people will love and protect the environment. Thank you.
