(1D-39)

Chinese New Year is a big festival for Chinese people. Many people go to dinner together. They give out red pockets with lucky money to children and put red decorations on their houses.

Firecrackers are common in the Chinese New Year but are forbidden in Hong Kong. My parents do not like crowded activity. So, I think we would not go to the seaside of the Victoria Harbour. We will stay at home watching TV.

Going to Temple is another important tradition in the Chinese New Year. People pray for good health and good luck for their family. And will say something good to everyone. The most popular one is "Kung Hei Fat Choi", which means "Wish you a good fortune".

So my favourite festival is the Chinese New Year.
