

Cooperation

What is cooperation? It means more than one person working together and share the job, so that we can finish the job easily and quickly. Cooperation is tangible but we all know that it is existing and it can improve our work to be more effective. Moreover, we can build up our relationship through cooperation.

We can see cooperation everywhere, for example, in work, sports or society. In work, people are allotted some parts of the job and they can utilize their energy to finish the job in a short period. Furthermore, when we meet some problems, we need to think about solutions to settle the problems, for instance, we can share the problems with others and discuss together. Also, during this period, we can improve our interpersonal relationship sensibly.

Overall, cooperation is very important for us because if we all cooperate with others, the society will develop peacefully and beautifully.
