

My Favourite Novel : One of us is lying

Good morning, Principal, Vice-Principals, Teachers and Schoolmates,

Today I want to introduce to you a book called “One of us is lying”, written by Karen M. McManus. “One of us is lying” is definitely the book for you if you love detective stories. It is about five teenagers in detention. They are five dissimilar characters with five totally different lives.

The book starts with the death of Simon, the outsider in school. He had an allergic reaction while in detention and had to go to the emergency room, where he died; and suddenly everybody is a suspect. Of course, it’s obvious from the beginning of the book that the four remaining students are suspects, but also there is the teacher and the car accident outside the school, which you keep in mind throughout the book.

This book is so thrilling that you can’t put it down. It is written very well, so you fly through the pages and get to know the characters page by page. I loved that we got the perspectives of all four students. With their point of view, it was impossible to guess who the killer was. I had no idea what to think and what to believe. Step by step you learn more about their imperfect lives. You keep guessing until the big revelation at the end of the story.

I highly recommend this book to you, especially if you love exciting, thrilling, detective stories. This is a book you must not miss.

This is the end of my sharing. Thank you.
